THE ART MUSEUM BULLETIN

This MUSEUM BULLETIN is published at irregular intervals as the progress of the Museum demands. This is the third number.

MUSEUM NOTES

On July 1, 1930, Miss Alice Van Vechten Brown retired as Director of the Museum and was succeeded by Professor Myrtila Avery, who is also Chairman of the Department of Art.

The Museum Committee held an important meeting on June 16, 1930 and decided upon a reorganization, which is now in effect. . . See page 12 of this BULLETIN.

Goucher College has sent a graduate to take the Museum Training Course.

The pressure upon Museum services had so increased of late that it became necessary to meet the situation. The college library has cooperated generously, as it is always ready to do, by giving the Museum the services of one of its staff, Miss Elizabeth M. Trumbull (who is a former graduate of our Museum Training Course) for five half days a week. A full time cataloguer of photographs, Miss Esther Van Allen, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke College and of the School of Library Service, Columbia University, was added also to the Museum staff in 1928.

The Museum of Modern Art, 730 Fifth Avenue, New York City, secured in 1929-1930 the services of Associate Professor Alfred H. Barr, Jr., as its first Director.

In January, 1929, the Fogg Art Museum of Harvard University borrowed for its notable French exhibition the "Montigny les Corneilles 1832" by Camille Corot, belonging to our Museum. This autumn the Museum of Modern Art in New York City also asked for the privilege of showing it in its exhibition of Corot and Daumier. In both places it caused much favorable comment.

In 1927, the Secretary of the Museum, Miss Celia H. Hersey visited a number of museums, as far west as Chicago, to examine and report. This undertaking proved so valuable to the Museum that it would be desirable to repeat it as often as every second year.

Mr. Norbert Heermann, after his lecture on October 17, 1930, met interested visitors in the gallery and informally discussed his exhibition. A dinner in his honor was given at Tower Court.

From October 27 to November 17, 1930, a group of artists living in Wellesley and vicinity, were given the use of the gallery for a delightful exhibition of their work. Visitors from far and near came to view it. On Saturday, November 1, a tea was held in the gallery, which was attended by more than three hundred persons.

Many college students continue their art work during the summer. Exhibitions of their work were held in the Museum in the autumns of 1928, 1929 and 1930.

The College Art Association is circulating this winter a Traveling Exhibition of works of art owned by the different college museums. The Wellesley Museum was glad to be able to contribute to it by lending "Clouds at Sunset" by Charles H. Davis.

The cost of publishing this issue of the BULLETIN has been met by the generosity of one of the Committee. Mailing expenses have been paid from the Museum Funds.

There are on sale at five cents each five new photographic postal cards of important objects in the Museum.

NUMBER 3

MONTIGNY LES CORMEILLES

BY CAMILLE COROT 1796-1875

The sentiment in this picture seems strangely tense, which is unusual in Corot, even in his structural manner, of which the painting is an early example.

The massing of architectural forms suggests certain landscapes by Cézanne or the contemporary Derain or the backgrounds of Italian Primitives or the highly simplified detail in the landscapes of Titian and Poussin. The lighting and masterly brushwork would have appealed to Manet or Vermeer of Delft. The patterned interplay of light and dark, the breaking of architectural planes by planes of light, anticipate certain phases of cubism.

A different phase of Corot's great art is alone generally known to the American public, his idyllic scenes with feathery trees are charming, easily understood, but comparatively unimportant to the connoisseur, although it was these that first made his fame.

Corot's greater works are his figure studies and portraits and his so-called "early" landscape style which, however, he practiced throughout his life and of which, as we have said, this is one.

From notes by A. H. B., Jr.

FLEMISH TAPESTRY

EARLY 16TH CENTURY

This tapestry is one of the choice masterpieces of the Museum, a monument to the taste and judgment of a wise and generous giver.

The pictorial style in the Flemish manner of the period shows the influence of the Italian Renaissance, the colours are fresh and harmonious, the figures are charming, the mood gracious, but the underlying idea unifying the different figures is less easy to determine. There is Narcissus, with his lady (Echo ?) behind him, in love with his own reflection in the pool, and Hercules with club and lion skin, Deianira with him. Paris and Helen are there, and Esther and Ahasuerus and others, named in Gothic letters according to custom.

The border, which may or may not be later in date than the center, has been added separately. The seam where it has been sewed can be perceived on four sides. The difference from the center may be noted in the larger number of ribs, the finer hatchings and greater relief. This border in technique and design (interlacing strap and animal corners) is typical of the Renaissance period. The Brussels-Brabant mark, current from 1528 to the end of the century (the two capital B's on each side of a shield), on the left and the maker's monogram on the right are conspicuous on the border.

From notes by M. B. F.

FRIENDS OF THE MUSEUM

To promote the creation of a center of beauty at Wellesley, a group of Friends of the Museum has come into existence. Their function is not to make large gifts of money (although a Friend might also be a Donor), but rather to bring sympathy and moral support to the enterprise. They will be informed of all matters of interest in connection with the Museum, as they occur, and are trusted freely to bring information, advice and criticism.

DONORS OF THE MUSEUM FUND

The pledges of $1,000.00 a year for five years are conditional upon the whole sum of $5,000.00 a year being pledged.
